In contrast to recycling, discarded materials are not only reused in upcycling, but are also completely redesigned and thus significantly improved. The "strange" use of a washing machine drum as a hanging light also creates a special effect, which first provokes discomfort, then astonishment and, in the best case, total enthusiasm.

Upcycling not only conserves resources. The resulting objects are often funny and always original. The fact that the objects are torn from their original context, but are still recognizable, create a special charm.

Inspired by the award-winning blog of author Antonia Edwards shows the book "Upcyclist" items that are ordered by materials such as wood, glass, textile or plastic. In order to replicate the ideas and suggestions, perhaps not every craftsman is gifted enough. For this reason, the names and places of residence of the designers help to find an original - or to look at the museum.
